Thomas J. McNulty

Partner | Real Estate

OVERVIEW

Tom is a litigator who represents property taxpayers throughout the country, ensuring their tax liabilities are secured at the lowest level allowable under the law. He represents clients spanning numerous industries, ranging in size and complexity from those with large, sophisticated real estate portfolios to those with just one building critical to their operations.

Tom sets his clients' expectations regarding measurable results in every property tax appeal. Before filing, he provides a detailed plan to each client describing the objectives of the appeal, all risks associated with the chosen strategy and a strong target for the resulting tax liability supported by the available evidence. This approach enables each client to ask important questions, add significant contributions to the strategy and ultimately make a well-informed business decision before proceeding. When the appeal is concluded, clients can easily compare the predicted outcome with the actual results.

Having previously worked for the Cook County Attorney's Office, he understands the need to use professional but aggressive tactics when litigating property tax matters and interacting effectively with municipalities and tax assessors. Convincing assessors that they made a mistake in calculating tax owed can be challenging, but Tom's experience working on the other side helps him appreciate the complex factors being considered by opposing counsel in every appeal.

Tom is a former Chair and member of the Executive Board of the Civic Federation of Chicago, a nonpartisan research organization that promotes efficiency in government. In

He currently lectures at Chicago-Kent Law School on Illinois real estate tax issues as part of the Masters in Taxation program. He has also authored numerous articles regarding assessment ratio cases and the assessment and valuation of utility properties. In 2019, Tom received the Bernard L.
